The Epstein-Barr Virus: A New Factor in the Care of Chronic Pain

By Forest Tennant
DrPH, MPH, MD

In 1958, Dr. Denis Burkitt first discovered that the Epstein-Barr virus (EBV) caused cancers in African children.

The Epstein-Barr Virus is normally a harmless parasite in the human body. New research shows that it can activate and act as a catalyst or expeditor of severe, chronic pain conditions and some cancers.

Our research clearly shows that new tests and treatment measures for Epstein-Barr can provide significantly more pain relief when added to standard pain care. Failure to diagnose and control EBV autoimmunity, however, can lead to tragic consequences. I highly suggest that every person with chronic pain that requires daily medication acquire this book and share it with their physicians.
