Handbook for
Epstein-Barr Virus

Testing and Treatment
In Severe, Chronic
Pain Conditions

Forest Tennant DrPh, MPH, MD

The Epstein-Barr Virus (EBV) is now known to reactivate, invade tissues, and develop autoimmunity which may cause some cancers and severe chronic pain conditions. This handbook recommends who should be tested and how to interpret test results. Prevention of reactivation and treatment suggestions are presented.

“Our studies and observations compel me to believe that if EBV reactivation and autoimmunity is not recognized and controlled, the virus, often in tandem with others, may produce a progressive, debilitating, painful conditions.”
